What Why? Girl Scouts; Movement Is Explained

"On my honor I will try;
To do my duty to God and my country,
To help other people at all times,
To obey the Girl Scout Laws."

The Girl Scout promise by which every faithful Girl Scout endeavors to abide, implies the purpose of Scouting. What is this purpose? To develop an improved womanhood, in physicality, mentality and character.

The Girl Scouts of America was was founded in 1912 by Juliette Low, who had previously been a Girl Guide leader in England. The Scout organization was a direct outgrowth of the English Guides, but has assumed an individuality of its own necessarily adapted to this country.

In the year 1931 the Girl Scout movement spread to Addison. A group of mothers realizing the need of directed activity for their daughters, met with other friends and

Vincent Lake Said To Seek Senatorship

Present Encumbent, Earle Warner, of Phelps, Has Served But One Year—Recalls Withdrawal of L. F. Wheatley in 1932.

Reports published early this week stated that Vincent C. Lake of Hornell, a former member of the Board of Supervisors, was to replace Earle Warner of Phelps, as state senator from the forty-third senatorial district. This district includes the counties of Steuben, Ontario and Yates.

Leon F. Wheatley, newly elected mayor of Hornell, was Senator Warner's predecessor. His withdrawal from the primary contest in 1932 created something of a sensation at the time. It was announced by party leaders that a "gentleman's agreement" had been entered into, whereby Ontario County, was to have the senatorial nomination in 1932.

Corning Autoist Struck Mrs. Geo. Herrington

Mrs. George Herrington of Elk-R. D. 2, and her granddaughter, Carol Jean, were struck by an automobile in Corning Tuesday afternoon. They were removed to the Corning Hospital for treatment. Mrs. Herrington suffered a severe knee injury and bruises. Carol received a cut on her head and painful injuries to her knee.

According to Chief of Police A. W. Eckess, the woman and the child were struck by an automobile driven by Claude L. Wright, Painted Post, an employee of the Corning Glass Works. Accompanied by Mrs. Herrington's husband, who is serving as a juror at the local term of Supreme Court, they were hurrying to the spot where their car was parked on Pine street bridge, when they stepped into the path of the Wright machine.

Mrs. Herrington said that she saw the car approaching in time to make an attempt to push her granddaughter to safety but the child was struck by the side of the vehicle.

Mr. Wright made a report at police headquarters and accompanied the injured to the hospital as did Mr. Herrington and E. D. Hutchinson, Rochester, who witnessed the accident.

A. H. S. Basket Ballers Choose To Become Knights

Addison sport followers have often read newspaper articles containing such catch phrases as "the Pittsburgh Panthers", "the Nebraska Cornhuskers", "the Yale Bulldogs" and have probably wondered why Addison teams could not utilize some similar snappy expression to describe them. This year, the matter came into discussion at the local high school and the consensus of all, connected in any way with basketball, was that our high school basketball team should, most certainly, have a nickname which would distinguish it from neighboring rivals. The "Bat in the Belfry" Drew Full House at School Auditorium

Senior Play Tuesday Evening Kept Large Audience Thrilled With Its Mystery—Difficult Parts Well Acted by Amateur Players—Orchestra Gave Fine Program During Intermission.

A crowd that packed Addison High School auditorium to the limit of capacity Tuesday evening, was held tensly expectant every minute of the senior play, "The Bat in the Belfry." The play, a mystry drama, although difficult for amateurs to interpret, was capably acted by the 1934 seniors who were well coached by their director, F. Arden Burt.

The story of the play concerned a country church which had grown to great strength under the able pastorate of the Rev. William B. Westcott, played by Wilbor Hannahs. At the time of the first act the minister's health was broken by a mystry that had frightened most of his congregation away from services—a phantom red robed creature was snatching innocent girls from his congregation, sending threatening letters and causing the church bell to ring eratically.

When the shock of these experiences caused the Rev. Westcott's death, his son Wayne (Richard Hovey) who had been studying for the ministry, came home to assume his father's charge. Baffled by the threats of the Red Robe, Wayne engaged Bill Brown, (Maynard Allen) and old friend and skilled government detective, to unravel the mystry and restore the confidence of his congregation. Jean Fealton (Theo Crist) one of four sisters living next door to the parish house, soon won Wayne's heart. Jean's sister Helen Jeanette Dykins) had been spirited away, presumably by the Red Robe, and her sister Marjory (Dorothy Myres) had been bereft of speech.

Bill Brown's detective work became tangled by the presence on the scene of Lorina Loring (Helen Boyer) a writer of Hollywood mystery thrillers, the Duke of Picadil-

JOHN AUMICK

The people of this community suffered a distinct loss this week by the death of an esteemed citizen and honored public official, John Aumick.

John Aumick, dying Sunday morning after filling the office of Town Superintendent of Highways for nearly six years, leaves an irreparable gap in the town of Addison. There is an old saying, "It is hard for an official to please the public", but the saying did not hold true in Mr. Aumick's case. He not only pleased the people of the town he served, but he served them efficiently, honestly and without favoritism. Running for re-election less than two weeks before the day he died, Mr. Aumick polled the largest vote of any man on the ticket.

There was nothing ostentatious or flashy about Mr. Aumick. He was just a plain, everyday citizen, whom the people recognized for his intrinsic worth because he never pretended to be more than that. Sincere in his beliefs, faithful to his trusts, fair to employees, he was accepted at full face value for he was wise enough not to overvaluate himself. A regular attendant at church, he "rendered unto Caesar the things that were Caesar's, and to God the things that were God's.

Never wealthy in the world's goods, still John Aumick was rich in the spirit, and his plain friendly words made the road brighter for all who walked beside him. Well might it be said of him, "This was a man."

A BIG MAN SPEAKS

With so many influences and agencies working to extend the socialist program in the United States, it is heartening to those who believe in the superiority of private initiative and enterprise, to read the following courageous expressions from a recent address of former Governor Alfred E. Smith at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago. Mr. Smith said in part:

"As I went through the fair I thought to myself that there is still another great lesson for the people of this country to learn . . . Aside from the assistance of Divine Providence, what has made this century of progress?

"If you will study this fair, you will be obliged to come to the conclusion that this century of progress was brought about by individual initiative; by the strength, the power, the courage, the brains and the ability of the men and women of the Republic of North America. Whether you point to progress in industry, science, invention, transportation, or the arts, what you see here is the triumph of the mind and the hand of free men, without dictatorship.

"Ninety per cent of the exhibits here mark advances in our civilization due entirely to individuals, working without inspiration, compulsion, control or even suggestion from the government itself. In fact, it is noteworthy that the government has done very little to contribute to this cenury of progress, while, on the other hand, much has been prevented, much has been thwarted, much has been hindered, by the heavy, cold, clammy hand of bureaucracy.

"Now let us not be too cynical about the motives that have actuated the men who have wrought these buildings which house miracles of science and invention. Pride of achievement, ambition to excel, love of work and art have had more to do with it than the mere desire to make money or to exploit others. And it is a matter of common fact . . . that government is at its best when it supplements and cooperates with private industry.

"And a century from now another exposition will arrive here, to mark another century of triumphant progress of free men, under the American Constitution."

SILVER IN THE LIMELIGT

Silver is going to be very much in the headlines when Congress meets again.

It's going to be there for a number of reasons —because world trade is still lagging and many authorities believe that higher silver prices must be achieved before it can pick up; because talk of inflation has caused still other authorities to remark that some plan for silver monetization might be a cure for currency ills; because the general depression in the mining industry has deprived thousands of jobs, and lost the nation millions in purchasing power, taxes, etc.

WHERE ARE WE BOUND?

Withdrawal from the cabinet of Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, and Undersecretary Acheson, leaves the road wide open for President Roosevelt to follow his inflationist advisers to Greenback City. Although Mr. Woodin is not technically out of the cabinet, as he goes to Arizona his influence on administration policies must be considered extremely negligible.

It must be admitted that the Gold Policy which Professor Warren succeeded in starting, has had its effects. Yet it is hard to see how the panacea can cure the disease. Here are some of the effects created: Purchase of gold abroad has driven the price of the dollar down until foreigners called back their dollar balances, Americans rushed to exchange dollars for foreign money. Fear of inflation seriously pressed down the price of U. S. bonds, forcing most important U. S. issues below par. People who subscribed for the new 4¼—3¼ per cent bonds on November 1, at 101½ found them selling at 99, an ill omen for future government financing. When the new bonds began selling at a discount conversions of 4th Liberties practically ceased, threatening failure of the refunding operation.

Many people do not understand just what meaning to attach to the slump in price of Government securities. They remember that after the World War, Liberty bonds dropped down to about 80 cents on the dollar, yet eventually came back to par. What they forget is, during the period of the big slump in U. S. bond prices the government had become self-supporting, the budget was balanced, and no need existed for floating new issues.

Now the case is reversed. At the tremendous rate the administration is spending money, new funds must necessarily be raised, not only for financing the present program, but for refunding issues falling due. Up to the first of November it was encouraging to note how eagerly the public subscribed to all the issues offered. But now the price of the U. S. bonds is slipping, the public can be expected to hesitate about purchasing securities that promise to get cheaper and cheaper.

The Government at present seems definitely committed to this huge spending program, hence funds must be raised to finance it. If the public should refuse to buy bonds then the only alternative which the Administration has left is the issuance of greenbacks.

Economist Frederic Jenny of France has predicted: "Not far distant is the fatal moment when Mr. Roosevelt will be faced with the dilemma of chaotic inflation, or a return to dollar stability." Apparently the Frenchman sized the situation up quite accurately. Juggling with the price of gold and the commodity dollar the last few weeks has unquestionably shoved us nearer the brink of Inflation Chasm. It will be harder to go back to sound money now, than it would have been to hold the ground a few weeks ago. But we must go either backward or forward.

The shift of the Treasury Department points almost certainly towards the next stage being a "greenback" deluge. It is another experiment, greatly to be feared. Backed by America's huge gold reserve few people think inflation will ever reach the point here that it did in Germany, yet some day, some way we must eventually strike back into the era of sound money—money that everybody has confidence in.

The farther the Administration leads us along "Inflation Road", whether it be to the fifty cent dollar, the twenty-five cent dollar, the ten cent dollar, or the five cent dollar, just so much harder will be to restore the orderly life of the country.

STATE REGULATION AT ITS BEST

In an article in the Public Utilities Fortnightly, William A. Prendergast, former chairman of the public service commission of New York, points out that the state commissions are at the crossroads. On the one hand they are subjected to political pressure of an unusually strong nature, due to the uncertainty of the time, and on the other they are confronted by Federal incursions into fields which formerly were exclusively in the province of the state.

Mr. Prendergast makes two suggestions which he believes must be adopted if the utility commissions are to survive and if regulation is to be honest, effective and in the public interest. The first is that the commissions should be agencies independent of political interference from any quarter, whether it be governors, municipal governments or civic organizations, and, secondly, that they should establish a definite system of determining a rate base and adhere to it.

The second suggestion is a matter for economists and engineers to thrash out. The first, which is much more vital, is, in one sense, up to the public. If political pressure of one kind or another has sometimes harmed and disrupted state regulation, it is because the public has permitted it to do so. High officials, particularly in state government, have attempted to make the commission do certain things, irrespective of legal or economic justification. They have sought to make the commissions an ally in their efforts to manufacture votes and curry public favor. In brief, they have attempted—and, according to Mr. Prendergast, not without success in some instances—to "politicize" state regulation of public service institutions.

The state commissions, like the courts, must exist above party and local considerations, above all the machinery of political manipulation, or they must eventually cease to exist at all. This is a public matter indeed—and a wise and awakened public has it in its power to cure a condition which may rapidly become unendurable.

Night Noises in the Forest

A bough bed in the forest
In a darkness that consoles;
A specter breeze removing ash
That films the glow of coals.
Away from din of city,
Where King Silence reigns profound
And builds an amplifier
For all intermittent sound!
Why sleep? I'm healed by silence
And the fitful sounds that bite
Through the magnified acoustics
Of a virgin woods at night.

Nocturnal noise is natural made
In forests dark and dense.
It strikes the auditory
Of the soul in recompense
For artificial hubbubs
That offend the body's ear,—
The din that hound-dogs whine about,
That wakes the child with fear;
Where autos' ululations
And locomotives' scream
Are mixed with other discords
Permeating man's regime.

The red squirrel's tread is heavy
As the deer's the laugh of loon,
The Hoot of owl, the saw-whet's rasp,
The night-hawk's muted boon;
The ghost-call of the heron in flight,
The breeze, the stream;
The song bird's stretch at midnight,
Singing in his dream!
I'm drugged with joy, enchanted
Beyond my power to keep.
Too sleepy to be kept awake;
And far too charmed to sleep.

The silence is not "broken"
By the forest sounds at night;
It is saved from malefaction,
Nature's voices set it right.
The hurricane and earthquake,
The lightning's spiteful spit
That visit us in daylight—
"The Lord is not in it".
"A sound of gentle stillness"
In the night suggests all Good
Through the megaphonic music
Of the mystifying wood.

Political Air Filled With Schemes For 1934 Elections

Albany, Nov. 21—The mouths of the prophets are full of wild political guesses these days, probably as a result of the row in the Democratic party, the upset of Chairman Farley's plans to capture the State Assembly and the New York City Mayoralty, the feeling of uncertainty in Washington, and several other things. The latest has Governor Lehman retiring next year at the end of his first term, Mr. Farley as the Democratic candidate to succeed him, Senator Copeland going to France as Ambassador, and Alfred E. Smith put in the shoes of Mr. Copeland. There may be just a little fire underneath all this smoke. It is barely possible Mr. Lehman may not again be a candidate for Governor. His health is not of the best, for one thing; for another, it is known the President would like to honor him with some appointment, not too burdensome, in recognition of Mr. Lehman's substantial support of the Roosevelt ambitions. That Mr. Smith would desire the Senatorship is unlikely. He could have been Mayor of New York City for the asking, but declared he could not afford to take that four-year position with its $40,000 salary from a business point of view. He could hardly afford, then, to take the Senatorship, which pays $10,000.

This is Probably a Record

It is thought the record for official absenteeism is held by one Edward Cassidy, a Democrat re-elected to the office of Alderman in the Sixteenth District of New York City this fall. According to his own statement he has not attended a meeting of the board in five years, on account of physical incapacity, and there is no prospect that he will be able to do so during his next term of two years. Alderman Cassidy's sole argument for votes was: "If I am elected this time, that will give me twenty years of service, and then I can get a pension". His salary is $5,000 a year. The case is not as bad as it seems on the surface because the other 64 Aldermen of the city do very little more for their $5,000 a year than Cassidy does. One of the reforms promised by the new Mayor, La Guardia, is the abolition of the entire board.

"Not as I Do, But as I Tell You"

There is much comment over the fact that many attaches of the present Federal Administration seem to feel they are themselves immune from regulations they lay down for others. Even General Johnston, head of the NRA, did not give the employees in his department the benefit of the shorter hours that organization forced upon private employers until they organized under the Federation of Labor and demanded it. While Secretary Perkins of the Department of Labor was telling manufacturers they must give shorter hours and higher pay, some of her own employees quit their jobs because they were overworked as to time. But the shining example is Mr. James A. Farley, Postmaster-General. He has been ousting Republican postmasters on the slightest excuse for alleged "pernicious political activity". Yet he practically abandons the official duties for which the public pays him in order to inaugurate and carry on active political campaigns in state and city, in both of which, incidentally, he got soundly trimmed. Evidently Mr. Farley feels that he is above the rules that apply to the ordinary human.

After Speakeasies for Taxes

Between now and Dec. 5, when it is expected repeal of the Enghteenth Amendment will be accomplished, it is proposed to go after all the speakeasies of the state and make them pay a sales tax on the proceeds of their business. Mark Graves, President of the State Tax Commission, has instructed all tax examiners to round up the drink places and make them "come across". Very few people in this business have filed any report, though they are liable for the tax along with those in the mercantile or any other retail business. There is no intention to prosecute the proprietors and the information they give in connection with payment of their tax will not be available for that purpose. Mr. Graves expects a large return from this source—possibly as much as $1,000,000.

Keeping Politics Out of Liquor

When the Democrats were trying last winter to put over on the state their "Beer Bill" in its original form, which would have given them absolute control of the liquor business in the state, they sought to cover up its real character by much talk to the effect that it was entirely "non-political". One of the loudest talkers was Senate Leader Dunnigan. "We want," he said, "to keep the traffic in beer and other alcoholic beverages out of politics". He declared that political influence must not have any part in getting a license.

Where Actions Spoke Louder

The other day in New York City applications for licenses to sell liquor were received by the Beverage Control Board under strict regulations. Each applicant had to show that he had a lease or contract for the use of suitable premises and had to wait his turn in a long line. Mr. Dunnigan and two of his associates, Senators Burchill and Nunan, appeared on the scene. They pushed in ahead of the line nd demanded a quantity of application blanks. Being refused, they made such a fuss that the clerk gave them ten applications each, excusing this infraction of regulations by saying the Senators "raised hell until they got them." Later the applications were passed out to these politicians' henchmen who did not care to stand in line and wait with the balance. There have been many cases in the state where the Beer Law, even as amended, was used for political purposes. But there has been nothing quite so bold and defiant of public opinion, and so significant of the real purpose back of their bill of last winter, as the action of Senators Dunnigan, Burchill and Nunan.

WHY SHOULD I BUY

COOPERATIVE GRANGE LEAGUE FEDERATION EXCHANGE INC.
G.L.F. Quality

BECAUSE

Most dealers publish only that part of the analysis of their feeds which is required by law, while an open formula gives the amount of each ingredient in the mixture. A closed formula feed gives only a list of ingredients from which the feed is made; the proportions of the various ingredients and the digestible nutrients in the feed are never known. Manufacturers of both the open and the closed formula feeds are required to list on the tag attached to each bag the minimum protein, and the maximum fat and fiber content. The G. L. F. open formula feeds go a step further in the interest of the dairyman and list the digestible crude protein and the total digestible nutrient content.

took the first step in organization—the founding of a Girl Scout Community Committee. This committee was to establish and direct the Girl Scout movement in Addison.

The original Girl Scout Community Committee consisted of the following members: Mrs. John Chart, chairman; Mrs. Lynn Taylor vice-chairman, Miss Marjorie Mackay, secretary and treasurer, Mrs. William McCarthy, Miss Katherine Darrin, Mrs. Simon Hickey, Mrs. Robert Magoon, Mrs. Robert Brown, Mrs. Matthew Whitmore.

The local pioneers in this movement found their way fraught with difficulties as do pioneers in every case, but they have courageously surmounted them each step of the way. Friends of Scouting have lent invaluable aid; among the first of these were the Parent-Teachers' Association who presented the Addison Girl Scouts with the sum of twenty dollars; and Miss Katherine Darrin who turned over to them the receipts of a lecture delivered by her here.

Among the early leaders to whom the organization owes much gratitude are Miss Louise Palmer, Mrs. Robert Brown and Mrs. Stuart Bean, all of whom have given much time and effort.

From the humble beginning of nine applicants for the first rank of Scouting, the Addison Girl Scout organization has grown to number thirty-eight active and enthusiastic girls. The Community Committee is still the guilding hand, the committee now numbering ten members, including various vocations and denominations. They are Mrs. John Chart, chairman; Mrs. Lynn Taylor, vice chairman; Miss Janette Davis, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. William McCarthy, Mrs. Helen Robertson, Mrs. Simon Hickey, Mrs. Louis Handy, Mrs. Helen Hill, Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. Matthew Whitmore.

The Addison Girl Scouts have so increased in numbers as to necessitate an increase in leaders. Mrs. Walter McCulloch is acting as captain, being ably assisted by four lieutenants, Mrs. Kenneth McCaig, Mrs. F. Arden Burt, Miss Dorothy Sareen and Miss Mary Tobin.

Do you know what the Girl Scouts do? Their departments of activity are numerous and interesting. These are some of the branches of work which they are enthusiastically pursuing, aided by the following adults who examine them in the respective branches: Child Nursing, aided by Mrs. F. Arden Burt; World Knowledge, aided by Mrs. W. R. Perry; Observer, Nature, etc., aided by Rev. John Axtell and Mrs. Walter McCulloch; Athlete, aided by Miss Velma Harbeck; Housekeeper, canner, aided by Mrs. Edward Watkins; First Aid, aided by Mrs. Thomas Withey and Miss Genevieve Hoaglin; Home Nursing, aided by Mrs. Thomas Withey; Cooking, aided by Miss Catherine Flynn; Sewing, aided by Miss Catherine Flynn; Music, aided by Mrs. Lattimer Brewster.

One interesting branch of endeavor is that of hostess. As a means of learning the duties of hostess, the girls divide in groups of four. Each group, with their mothers to aid them, meet at their homes, preparing dinners, serving them, and otherwise learning the duties of hostesses and guests.

Do you think these girls are profiting by Scouting? Attend one of their rallies and watch their enthusiasm, their eagerness for the awards of the merit badges which approved work under the various departments brings them. Do you not believe that their lives are being made fuller, happier and more worth while? And if the present is bringing them happiness, health, trustworthiness, will not the future assure them a richer, fuller life, resourcefulness and integrity?

But is not the girls alone to whom Scouting is advantageous. It is giving to the community in which they live a superior girlhood, and eventually a higher womanhood. Can Addison afford to do less than to lend the Girl Scout movement its cordial cooperation and support in every line of endeavor?

were set in motion" to find a suitable name and the result was much thought, much research work, and many lengthy conferences and discussions. At last a decision was reached; a name was agreed upon. It is hoped that local basketball fans will agree with those who selected this name that, without doubt, it is the ideal one for our team. The word is so simple yet connotes so much. Local people are often referred to as "Addisonites", yet who stops to consider how this compound word might be construed? Could not one call a local basketball five the "Addisonites", and in the same breath, be thinking the "Addison Knights?" In the olden days a knight was one of good blood and fit character and training. Knights were respected for their courage and bravery on the battle field. Do not these definitions fit perfectly those who compose our high school team? Certainly they are all of "good blood, fit character and training". We know that. As for their "courage and bravery on the battlefield", one will need to see them in action only once to discover how well they fit this description. Visualize a headline something like this: "Addison Knights go a step further in their quest of the "Holy Grail" (better known as the Steuben County Championship) by defeating the ..... by a decisive margin." Any Addisonian should feel just pride in such a name. We're sure the team will live up to it through the winter. Why not plan to see them in action, early and often? Let's join in a toast to the success of the ADDISONITES in all their games for this season!

THANKS to Electric Refrigeration and clever housewives, the left-over is no longer something to turn up one's nose at. Its flavor and freshness are preserved by constant cold, and it appears on the best dinner tables in new, enticing forms.

But most important, economically speaking, is the fact that efficient use of left-overs (otherwise thrown away) can mean a substantial reduction in food costs. Approximately $4.50 a month for the average family is the U. S. Government estimate.

The experiment will be interesting, but perhaps disastrous.

Hewson Conducts Assembly

The boys' basketball team of the Addison High School will be in action in Friday's assembly at the school. A short game will be played and many fundamentals of the game demonstrated for the town people as well as the students. All those interested in basketball and the team will be welcome.

Many plays, as well as basket-shooting and guarding, will be shown so that people not skilled in watching and analyzing a game can see how it is played. Most people do not realize how a small mistake by one man will make the whole play a failure. The plays are carefully planned ahead of time and each man must do his own part. Very often the man with the ball is blamed by the public when the fault lies rightfully with one of his team-mates. Tomorrow's demonstration will enable the spectotor to stration will enable the spectator to with greater appreciation of the situation.

ly (Harold Lewis) a strange visitor, Ulysses Chattlewattle (Wilbur Bulkey) a sleuthing sleuther, and Madame Nona (Catherine Sprague) a mysterious gypsy. The tangle became complete when Brown's lifeless body was discovered in the church belfry with a blood-stained knife nearby. As the plot thickened one of the Fealton girls was hypnotized and led away by a terrible, stooped, grotesque figure whose upstanding gray hair sent shivers down the spines of the audience. Finally it was discovered that a lonely cabin within sight of the church belfry, proved a rifle rest where an unseen marksman could ring the bell with a bullet at night as well as day time. Helen Fealton returning home reported being held at this cabin by the terrible Red Robe until she finally escaped into Canada and eventually made her way back home.

When the denuement came the church and parish house had been surrounded by police, who captured the terrible gray-haired figure only to find he was Brown in disguise trying to catch the Red Robe. Then the Red Robe appeared in the Belfry brandishing a gun as Wayne started over the church roof in an attempt to head off the Red Robe's escape. When the church bell tolled off an extra stroke at the hour of three o'clock the body of the Red Robe came hurtled to the earth, landing in a lifeless heap that proved to be all that was left of Marjorie Fealton.

The play was dramatic from beginning to end, almost melodramic. Richard Hovey and Theo Crist played the leads capably throughout the drama. The part of Dr. Gilbert Henry, was protrayed well by Wesley Smith. Bernice Dickerson, as Amy the maid, acted actually "slower than a snail". A bit of real star acting was furnished by Maynard Allen, whose adaption of his two roles should earn him the sobriquet of the "Lon Chaney" of the class. Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Burt for his ability in directing high school students in a play with as heavy parts as "The Bat in the Belfry." In recognition of his extra work Mr. Burt was presented with a reading lamp, by members of the senior class.

The evenings entertainment was enhanced by the fine playing of the high school orchestra which played numbers at each intermission, bringing highly favorable comment from the audience.

The orchestra program was a follows:

"On Parade," "Desert Caravan'" "Souvenir" violin solo, David Stiker, "Our Director," Orchestra (Bill Colburn), Eldorado," orchestra, "Juanita" (Melephone Solo) Betty Perry, "Love's Old Sweet Song," Orchestra — Audience, "Mountain Laurel" orchestra, "Allegiance,' orchestra "Blue Streak," orchestra.

Addison To Benefit By Federal 400 Million Employment Fund

Local Officials Discuss Work Projects at Meeting Here Yesterday—Many Roads to Be Improved—Village Main Street May Be Greatly Enhanced By Changes

A meeting was held in Addison yesterday afternoon to arrange work projects to provide for the unemployed of the village during the next two and a half months. The meeting was attended by members of the town board, members of the village board, members of the school board and other prominent business men.

It was announced at the meeting that the Federal government plans to take over the burden of all work relief from the first of December until the middle of February. This expense will be paid out of the 400 million dollar fund recently provided for that purpose. On all public works projects that are approved by the government agents, the full labor expense will be paid out of this fund. Cost of materials for these projects must be borne by the communities benefitted. After the first of December all persons who are not then employed will be eligible for jobs. The rate of pay will start at 50 cent per hour minimum and go to $1.20 per hour for skilled work. Thirty-hour weeks will be observed.

It was decided at the meeting there are a number of improvements which could be profitably made in and around Addison, that will provide two or three months work for everyone who will work. While many of these projects would not be undertaken now under ordinary conditions, the fact that the labor constitutes the principal cost makes these undertakings immediately desirable. Putting a large force of men at work this winter will help both the workers and the entire community as well.

A list of projects that will be submitted for approval was made up as follows:

Improving the road from Maple street to the Addison Rural Cemetery, by laying a base of gravel. Widening the Lonesome Lodge road. Cleaning out the Baldwin Cemetery. Painting the Addison Main street river bridge. Cleaning up the Canisteo River bank through the village. Cutting brush on a number of highways. Painting the interior of the village hall. Putting a gravel base in the McCarthy road. Widening the Mose Hill road. Improving roads at the school building.

The subject of improving the Addison Main Street met with popular endorsement by most of the men present. The complete plan for this improvement would embrace filling the deep gutters between the brick pavement and the curbings, narrowing the sidewalks and thus making the street wider and facilities for parking cars more convenient. The first move necessary will be to replace the Main street sewers. It was voted to prepare an estimate of the cost of this piece of work, and if the relief fund is available later in the year after the new sewers are installed, to continue with the street and sidewalk improvement outlined.

Various men who attended the meeting will prepare labor cost estimates of these various projects for approval. All pieces of work approved for Addison, will be rushed along as fast as the weather will permit.

Salt Pork

Remember how the family used to scrap over the scraps of salt pork in the baked beans? Everybody wanted the meat, but not everybody could have a piece. Nowadays, the government says to eat pork, to use enough for everyone, and to give meals a meat flavor without the high meat cost.

Here are some recipes from the New York state college of home economics:

SAVORY GREENS: Fry until crisp, ½ cup of diced fat salt pork. Add 2 quarts of shredded cabbage, kale, spinach or other greens, cover the pan, and cook slowly until the greens are tender. Add 2 tablespoons of vinegar, and salt and pepper to taste.

SPANISH RICE: Chop about ½ pound of salt pork and fry it until crisp. Slice 2 onions and brown them in the fat. Add 1 quart of fresh or canned tomatoes and from 3 to 4 cups of cooked rice. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

SALT PORK IN QUICK BREADS —Chop or grind ¼ pound of salt pork, and fry out the fat until the cracklings are slightly brown. For spoon bread, cook 1 cup of corn meal with two cups of water, stirring constantly. Add to this 1 cup of milk, then the salt pork, fat and all. If possible, add 1 or 2 beaten eggs. Pour into a well-greased hot baking dish or pan, and bake 40 to 50 minutes in a hot oven (about 425 degrees Fahrenheit); or bake in a skillet on top of the stove, having a thinner layer. Fried-out salt pork can also be used as shortening in biscuits, griddle cakes and muffins.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare.

Strangely enough, there's no economic subject the average citizen knows less about than money. He uses it daily, but the tokens with which he barters, aren't really money at all. Their only value lies in the credit of the government issuing them. Real money is seldom seen—it is gold and it is jealously hoarded by treasuries.

As a result, the average citizen was pretty well puzzled when the U. S. Government announced that it had started a world gold buying campaign in an effort to raise commodity prices. He couldn't see the connection. As a matter of fact, the connection is simple enough if simply explained—it's very much like an auction. The more people you get to bid for an object, the more valuable it becomes. That's true of gold. When the United States went into the market there was another important bidder for the yellow metal, and its price rose accordingly. At the same time, the value of the dollar, which has a definite gold backing, declined, and commodity prices went up. Briefly described, the dollar has been cheapened, and it is worth less wheat, clothing and gasoline than it was awhile ago.

At the moment, the world's free gold supply, if melted down, would amount to a ten-foot cube, worth about $400,000,000. Since 1492, when Columbus discovered the new world, all the gold mined would amount to only a 40-foot cube and over half of that has vanished, either through being sunk in ships, made into jewelry, or hoarded.

Most important foe of the U. S. gold policy is the British Empire. London is the world's largest gold market, and any buying campaign will naturally center there. Dollars are exchanged for pounds, in order to buy in the English market, thus increasing the international supply of American currency and increasing the demand for English currency. A more expensive pound must follow, discouraging Britain's foreign trade. Matters are at a deadlock. It's going to be a monetary battle of the giants, with the two greatest financial powers of the world opposed.

Criticism of Administration policies, which was practically nonexistent a few months ago, has been gradually appearing, mostly on the part of large-scale business men. Their theme song is "Individualism, Where Art Thou?" and the villain in the piece is the fact that the government is steadily assuming more stringent control over all phases of business, showing no signs that it will relax this policy.

These business men cheered the recovery plan recently presented by Gerard Swope, General Electric's able, far-sighted president. Briefly stated, the Swope Plan proposes the setting up of an organization very similar to the NRA with this essential difference— control would be in the hands of boards of business men instead of government officials. Not pleased by it at all were labor leaders who doubted that the boards of big corporation executives would protect workers.

President Roosevelt said of the Swope proposal that the present time is not propitious for a change in plan—that "the next few months are expected to bring forth hundreds of other plans". Then he issued a summary of reports showing late achievements of the NRA, including: New employment for 2,000,000 people; increase in industrial outlets; a 20 per cent rise in hourly wages and 40 per cent drop in working hours. To his defense came distinguished Professor Edwin Seligman, saying that the depression is actually ended; that for the first time in history recovery from the bottom is being speeded consciously and effectively; that there is no basis for fear of uncontrolled inflation; that we are in the midst of a social revolution within the framework of capitalism, which promises lasting benefits.

Another very important bone of contention is the securities act. Some of the Administration's best friends, as well as business executives, believe it needs overhauling, is not only preventing issuance of worthless securities, but securities entirely legitimate and most essential to industry.

Prohibition repeal means the end of a number of the so-called "nuisance" taxes. These are: The 5 per cent tax paid by stockholders on dividends received; the one-tenth of one per cent tax paid by corporations on declared value of capital stock; and the 5 per cent tax paid by corporations on incomes in excess of 12½ per cent of declared value of capital stock. The 1½ cent federal gas tax will be reduced to 1 cent. It's likely that other taxes, such as that on bank checks, will go.

Both the Federal Government and the states are looking forward to liquor as the provider of tremendous sums of new revenue, are planning what to do with it. Principal danger is that there will be too many fingers in the flowing bowl, forcing the price of legal stuff to where the bootleggers will stay in business and undersell.

Days of the colorful sailing ship era were re-enacted at Los Angeles this week when the captain of a British oil tanker held a band of mutinous Chinese sailors at bay after fighting off one militant Chinese attacker who swung a meat cleaver at him. Nothing daunted, the captain signed a new crew and continued his voyage to the Dutch West Indies.

Large Enrollment In Herd Societies

Number of Cows Rose From 9,845 in 1925 to 38,382 in 1932—Gains in Production.

Dairy-herd-improvement associations in New York increased more than 200 per cent between 1925 and 1932, according to a recent report from Cornell University, and the number of cows in these associations increased more than four times, from 9845 cows in 1925, to 38,582 cows in 1932.

In 1932, the average annual production of all cows in New York associations was 8237 pounds of milk and 299 pounds of butterfat. The purebred cows in the associations produced on the average 1208 pounds more milk and 30 pounds more butterfat than did the grade cows.

A new Cornell bulletin explains that the service of herd-improvement associations is based on continuous individual records of milk and butterfat, and of the feed. These records are needed for "the most efficient feeding, for intelligent culling, and for determining and transmitting ability of the herd sires."

A good herd sire, the bulletin points out, is the most important animal in the herd. A low-producing cow can be disposed of as soon as her producing ability is sufficiently verified by records, but a bull must be at least five years old before his daughters' records can indicate his transmitting ability. The proving of a herd sire, by a comparison of the production records of at least five of his daughters with the production records of their dams, is made possible by the records of herd-improvement associations.

The bulletin entitled "Some Results of Dairy Herd Improvement Associations", suggests tested methods for obtaining better results from dairy herds. A post card addressed to the office of publication, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y., will bring it. Ask for E-266.

Veterinary College Combats Poultry Ills

State Institution Aims to Stamp Out Pullorum Disease — Must Have Test.

Pullorum disease, or bacillary white diarrhea, can be removed from New York state poultry flocks only by the testing of diseased flocks and the removal of infected birds, says Dr. C. C. Ellis of the New York state college of veterinary medicine. Since the disease is transmitted through the egg, the testing of the breeding stock and the removal of all infected breeders, he points out, should be the first step in control.

The blood test, he says, is the only reliable method now in use for detecting the disease. The test consists of collecting a sample of blood from each bird and having it examined in a poultry-disease laboratory.

All chickens and turkeys on the premises should be tested annually, and more often if possible, he says. Two or three tests before the breeding season, he points out, will result in more rapid control. The reactors should be removed at once and the poultry house and equipment thoroughly disinfected after their removal.

Other precautions are: Thoroughly boil all eggs which are fed to the birds; buy eggs and chicks from tested flocks only and rear them separately until they can be tested; quarantine all birds purchased, on returning from shows, and test them before placing them in the pens.

State Makes Tests

Dr. Ellis says that 80,000 birds in 170 New York state flocks have been tested during 1933 by the New York state veterinary college at Ithaca, and by its branch poultry disease laboratory at the state institute of applied agriculture, Farmingdale, L. I. Poultrymen should send their applications for this testing service to one of these laboratories, depending on the section of the state in which they live. The applications will then be forwarded to the cooperating veterinarian in the applicant's district. Growers who are contemplating this work should take the time, he says, to discuss their plans with the veterinarian who is assigned to the flock.

Testing certificates are issued to poultrymen who have tested all their birds and have used official leg bands. The aim of the testing service, he says, is to assist in establishing a number of clean flocks in New York state from which poultrymen may obtain stock free from Pullorum disease.

J. R. J. writes: "The mice in our orchard damage the bark of the trees each winter. Will you please tell me how I can get rid of the mice, or at least how I can keep them from girdling the trees.

G. W. Peck of the pomology department answers: "Poison bait has been used in many orchards effectively. The cost of making and applying the bait is comparatively small; and to reduce the population of mice seems the most desirable way of reducing injury.

"A very satisfactory poison bait may be made by this formula: Mix one-eighth ounce of powdered strychnine with an equal amount of baking soda, and sift this mixture over a quart of rolled oats or wheat. Stir the mixture thoroughly. Heat this material and add six tablespoons of melted tallow and two of paraffin. Stir the mixture until each oat flake or kernel of wheat is waterproofed.

"Place a tablespoon of this material in some container such as a tin can, tile, or wooden station made for the purpose, in the grass or weeds near the base of each tree, or along fence rows or rubbish piles. If possible, locate the runways and distribute some of the poisoned grains in them.

"Two methods of protection are: mounting the tree with earth, and the installation of galvanized wire cloth of one-quarter-inch mesh. even wrapping the trunks with building paper, tar paper, or wood veneer will greatly reduce the injury.'

Citron Preserves

Mrs. H. S. G. writes: "We raised a few citron in our home garden this year, and would like a recipe for preparing them as preserves. No cookbook that we have gives such a recipe."

The following recipe is included in the new Cornell bulletin, Jellies, Preserves and Fruit Juices:

1 pound prepared citron
1 pound sugar
½ lemon, sliced thin
2 tablespoons preserved, sliced ginger(if desired)
2 quarts water

Cut the citron into one-fourth inch cubes, cover them with salt water (1 tablespoon of salt to each quart of water), and let them stand overnight. Drain the citron and rinse it with cold water. Cover it with boiling water, cook it rapidly for fifteen minutes, and again drain it. Boil the sugar and the water for five minutes, add the citron, the sliced lemon, and the preserved ginger, and boil the mixture rapidly until the citron is transparent. Put the preserves in clean, hot jars, and seal them. The ginger may be omitted.

A copy of this bulletin 7-267, is sent to you on request, from the office of publication, New York state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Test Milk By Mail

D. L. S. writes, "What is the milk-testing-by-mail service of dairy record clubs? How much does it cost, and how does one obtain it?

J. W. Avery of the central New York farm bureau dairy record club replies: "Your county agricultural agent will help you arrange for this service through your county dairy record club, which works with the local farm bureau.

"Each month the dairyman sends milk samples from each of his cows to the laboratory, where the milk is tested and the reports are mailed back to him. The club provides each dairyman with a sample-mailing box, a sampling dipper and complete record forms.

"The report shows each cow's milk test, and her total production of both milk and butterfat to date. It also carries a record of grain eaten by each cow.

"The plan has proved entirely successful for herds of from one to one hundred cows. The cost is twelve cents a cow a month, with certain deductions for large herds.

"The central laboratory at the New York state college of agriculture now tests for members in thirty-four counties of the state, and all other counties are provided with a similar service."

TELL ME AN INDIAN STORY

Dr. E. A. Bates Cornell

(Copyright, 1932)

Medicine Moon

The gray clouds hung heavy over the western hill overlooking the Indian village and the breath of the north wind was growing colder each hour. Finally, as the sun went to rest, from the dark clouds fell the first snow-flakes of the year.

Lazy farmers were troubled, for their crops were still in the field; but the other farmers sat beside their fire-logs knowing well they had plenty of corn, beans and squashes to last over the long winter moons.

Then came the warm days of "lazy-farmer moon" which the pale face calls "Indian summer". During this time, the lazy farmer is granted by the Great Spirit a last chance to garner his crops.

While the lazy farmer works, the other farmers walk into the woods, for it is the "good-medicine moon" for them. The frost and cold weather have driven all the juices into the roots, and from plant to plant the medicine seekers wander.

The root of the mandrake is for dizzy headaches when one eats too much and does not exercise; and the wild turnip is for cramps in the stomach when one has drunk water from the ice-covered spring during the winter hunt. The long, slender roots of the hepatica are good when the liver needs a tonic; and the thick root of the goldenseal is for mother when pains come to her back. The medicine gatherers forget not the berries of the wintergreen to be cooked with the venison in the winter, and the wild thyme to garnish the partridges when they are roasted for the visiting tribesmen.

Another Cause for Thanksgiving: Turkey Will Be Lower This Year

Try A New York State Turkey, Counsels Commissioner Baldwin

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN

Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets Albany, New York

MOTHER Nature has done her year's work. The fruits of earth have been garnered. Families and friends gather about the festive board on Thanksgiving Day with praise in their hearts that the earth has again been lavish in her response to the husbandman's skill and that beauty and joy and happiness still attend.

Charles H. Baldwin

Time and greater knowledge has wrought many changes in the character of the feast and its observance. One thing remains the same, however—the central piece about which the "fixin's" are arranged. The turkey still holds first place, although to the rest of the menu have come many changes. The variety served, the size of the portion, the combination of foods, have all been modified. And pie, which used to appear in several varieties in the holiday meal, must now share honors with lighter desserts.

These radical changes are due, of course, to changing viewpoint first as regards the function of food, and second as to the significance of the holiday. The modern knowledge of nutrition has taught us the value of the simple menu—with emphasis on the protective foods—milk, vegetables, fruit—and instead of giving heartfelt thanks for Nature's bounty, as did the Pilgrim fathers, we merely celebrate an historical occasion.

Turkeys originated in the western hemisphere and are one of America's important contributions to the world's food supply. Turkey production for the country as a whole showed a declining trend for several years after the World War, reaching a low point in 1927. With the gradual adoption of improved methods and with profitable returns to growers, numbers have tended to increase since that year until in 1932 the turkey crop was the largest on record, probably exceeding 19,000,000 birds.

New York State produces about 170,000 turkeys annually, having a value of $684,000. The ten most important producing counties are: St. Lawrence, Jefferson, Lewis, Oneida, Oswego, Chautauqua, Delaware, Steuben, Otsego and Erie. The first three produce half the turkey crop of the State. Other important counties are Dutchess, Albany, Wyoming, Cortland, Cattaraugus and Washington.

Catching turkeys for the market on a New York State farm

Although turkeys formerly sold for considerably more per pound than chickens, the improvement and production methods had lowered the cost, and the spread in price between turkeys and chickens has decreased greatly in recent years. While the price received in 1932 will lead many turkey growers to reduce or dispose of their flocks, the very low prices for feed made it possible to produce the birds in that year at a very low price.

Fruit---Flowers---Garden

Iris Borer Eggs

Moths of the iris borer may lay as many as six hundred eggs in a single night, reports Dr. Grace Griswold of the New York state college of agriculture, who is making a laboratory study of iris borers this fall.

The eggs are cream-colored at first, she says, and later turn lavender. In the breeding cages in the laboratory, the moths lay eggs on nearly everything that has a rough or crinkled surface. The tiny eggs are laid in clusters and are carefully pasted down.

Dr. Griswold points out that a late fall cleaning of the iris bed will destroy many iris borer eggs, since the moths continue to appear and lay eggs during the entire month of October and as late as the first week in November. Eggs which are left in the garden throughout the winter, she says, will hatch into the injurious larvae about the first of May.

"Burn every dead leaf and bit of debris you can find", she advises, "and leave the iris bed looking as clean as a whistle."

John Aumick, Superintendent Of Highways, Claimed By Death

Was Recently Re-elected to Office for Another Term of Two Years—Born in Addison and Had Resided Here During Greater Part of Life.

John Aumick, for the past several years superintendent of highways of Addison township, died Sunday morning, November 19 at the office of Dr. Stewart H. Bean.

Mr. Aumick had recently been a patient in the Corning Hospital, where he had been sent for observation and treatment. He returned some two weeks ago and had resumed his local round of activities and interests. Saturday evening he brought Mrs. Aumick, their daughter Bernice and his sister, Mrs. Belle Stickler to the Addison Baptist Church. He then went to a downtown lunch room where he ate a light meal. Shortly thereafter he started for his home on Goodhue Hill, but feeling extreme pains, went to the office of Dr. Bean for treatment. At about seven o'clock the members of his family, together with the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, were summoned from the gathering at the Baptist Church. Dr. H. E. Auringer was later called into consultation and every effort was made to save his life, but he expired at about six o'clock the following morning.

Mr. Aumick was born on Goodhue Hill, August 12, 1880. He was the son of Monroe and Harriet Crane Aumick. His education was received in the Addison schools. In early life he served for a time as a railroad employee. He was also a lineman for several years with the Bell Telephone Co., and was employed for a period in Geneva, N. Y. In later years he has been engaged in farming, the last ten years having been spent on the former Benjamin Thompson farm which he purchased just prior to his removal there.

Mr. Aumick had been active for many years in Republican party circles. He was a regular attendant of the First Baptist Church of Addison and had been superintendent of the church Sunday school for the past three years. He was a member of the Encampment and Subordinate Lodge of Odd Fellows, and was serving as noble grand at the time of his death. He was also a member of the Rebekah Lodge and had been active in affairs of the Dairymen's League.

Mr. Aumick is survvived by his widow and by six children, Leon, Carl, Elmer, Amy, Bernice and Margaret, all of Goodhue Hill; a granddaughter, Dorothy Lee Aumick of Goodhue Hill; a brother, Fred Aumick of Geneva; a sister, Mrs. Belle Stickler of Goodhue Hill; and a number of nieces and nephews, as follows: Amy and Ferrell Smith of Hammondsport; Charlotte, Inez, Bessie, Nelson and Elob Aumick of Geneva; Mrs. Hattie Telahy of Elmira and Fred Burgess of California.

The funeral was held yesterday afternoon at the First Baptist Church at two o'clock, following a short prayer service at his late home. The Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold, pastor of the Baptist Church, officiated, assisted by the Rev. John V. Axtell, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. Interment was made in Rural Cemeter with the Odd Fellows Lodge in charge of the burial ritual.

During the hour of the funeral all stores and business houses on Main street were closed in tribute to his high standing in the community.

COMMUNICATION

Addison, Nov. 20

Editor Addison Advertiser

Dear Sir:

Attending the opening of the Star Theatre under its new management brought forcibly to my attention the importance of the big-city policy of picture presentation which has been adopted. I am wondering, however, if the majority of Addison business men realize the improvement in local conditions which such a policy means?

In the past movie fans from this village have been obliged to go to Corning and Elmira in order to see the better class of screen entertainment. This has meant a steady outflow of cash to nearby cities, not only in the form of admission charges but for other purchases which one makes in a city.

Now conditions have changed and Addison will have shows the equal of those appearing in larger places and it seems to me that Addison merchants should not prove neglectful of their opportunities to draw and keep money into town by failing to attend local movies themselves.

Mrs. Frank Kelly Entertains Local D. A. R. Society

Excellent Report Upon State Conference Given by Mrs. Sheldon Clark, Regent of Both Chapter—Society Contributes $5.00 to Red Cross.

An interesting report upon the recent state conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution, held in Rye, N. Y., was given at a meeting of Onwentsia Chapter, D. A. R., last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Kelly on Maple street, by Mrs. Sheldon D. Clark, regent of Bath Chapter.

Mrs. Charles L. Crane, regent of Onwentsia Chapter, presided at the meeting which was held in celebration of the birthday of Mrs. Russell Magna, president-general of the organization. It was voted that the sum of $5.00 be contributed to the Addison Red Cross organization. It was noted that funds heretofore used to purchase flowers for members and others who were ill should in the future be contributed to the school milk fund. Letters were read from Mrs. J. C. Brown, Mrs. Joseph Mayer and Mrs. Howard Crane, expressing appreciation for floral remembrances. It was announced that an endowment had been received from the estate of Mrs. Mary Brooks for care of a cemetery plot, the cemetery being under supervision of the D. A. R. An offering was taken to be sent to Washington, D. C., as a contribution toward the cost of Constitution Hall, latest building in the group comprising D. A. R. headquarters at the National Capitol. The president- general's message for the month was read by Mrs. Charles Crane, regent. Songs composed by the president-general were sung by all present.

Mrs. Clark in her report, gave many interesting highlights of the conference. She mentioned that the conference had voted to assume the expense of furnishing the Susan Delancey Van Rensselaer Strong memorial room at Fort Crailo. This shrine of the Revolution, the birth place of "Yankee Doodle", is now owned by the D. A. R.

The conference also voted to continue a fund to provide scholarships in seventeen schools throughout the country, including Tamesee and Kate Duncan Smith, two schools owned and operated by the national society of the D. A. R.; to endorse the project of the state of New York to preserve the Shoemaker House at Mohawk, Herkimer county, a building that played an important part in Colonial and Revolutionary history.

The conference also, according to Mrs. Clark, voted to petition the national society of the D. A. R. to support the bill before Congress which would make the Saratoga Battlefield a military park. Another action taken was to place the student loan fund of the organization on a quota basis. Many chapters offered to pay their quota, however, and many voluntary subscriptions were forthcoming. The following statement with respect to this activity was made by Mrs. Fisher Joslyn, chairman:

"One of the most outstanding of the newer projects undertaken by the New York State Daughters in their desire to do their share in educating the youth of New York State, has been their formation of the student loan fund. This fund is of the revolving type, by which students repay their loans, rather than the endowment type, by which the student is given the money from interest accruing on moneys invested. The New York Daughters chose the revolving type, feeling strongly that in helping our college students they must at the same time preserve within them true American respect. Seven students have been aided since the formation of the fund and repayments of loans have been highly satisfactory."

Following the business meeting dinner was served with Mrs. W. S. Long and Miss Helen Smith as assistant hostesses. Decorations were carried out in blue and white. The evening was spent with bridge and cribbage. Those present were: Mrs. Sheldon D. Clark of Bath; Mrs. Charles L. Crane, Mrs. Alfred Chatfield, Mrs. Fred C. Taber, Mrs. James Park, Sr., Mrs. Rufus Baldwin, Mrs. Minnie E. Harden, Miss Jessica Turner, Mrs. Charlels J. Coon, Mrs. Fred G. Clark, Mrs. George Freeman, Mrs. M. G. Hubbs, Mrs. Wilfred Miller, Mrs. Burr Noble, Mrs. Nelson B. Payne, Mrs. Carrie Saxton, Mrs. Maple Woodhouse, Mrs. Ralph Dykins, Mrs. Nina T. Mann, Mrs. W. S. Long and Mrs. Frank D. Kelly.

Redeemer Auxiliary Meets With Mrs. Rial

Members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Church of the Redeemer held a regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Harry Rial on Maple Street Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Fred G. Clark called the meeting to order at 3 o'clock in the absence of Miss Katherine Darrin, president. It was voted to hold a parish supper in the church basement at 6:30 Monday evening, December 4. Mrs. Charles Park was appointed general chairman. Following routine business a social time was enjoyed and the hostess served refreshments to the following: The Rev and Mrs. Thomas A. Withey, Mrs. Minnie Cronk, Mrs. Stratton Park, Mrs. Wilfred Miller, Mrs. Burr Noble, Mrs. Bliss Weatherby, Mrs. Guy Mayer, Mrs. John M. Wright, Miss Carolyn Fritts, Mrs. Carrie Smith, Mrs. Keyes Whitmore, Mrs. John M. Crane, Mrs. Ada Wade, Mrs. E. D. Curtis, Mrs. David Phillips, Mrs. Adelaide Park, Mrs. Charles F. Park, Mrs. W. R.
